Natural
Fibre
Flooring

A close-up photograph of a woven natural fiber mat, likely made of jute or sisal. The fibers are light brown and intricately woven in a tight, repeating pattern. The texture is highly detailed, showing the individual strands and the way they interlock. The lighting is soft, highlighting the natural sheen and slight variations in color of the fibers.

Why Choose
Natural Fibre
Flooring?

The rustic subtleties of nature are woven into the very heart of our natural fibre flooring. Beyond simply functional, our designs are charming and indulgent.

Flooring is the first thing you feel as you step into a room, setting the tone of comfort and style.

Artisan can change the entire look and feel of your room, adding value, warmth and beauty.

Decorating the floors, walls and ceilings of many cultures throughout history, natural fibre flooring has become a popular addition to New Zealand homes and businesses - the perfect choice for an elegant interior.

Natural Fibres

ARE THEY DURABLE?

Coir, Seagrass and Sisal, tough fibres renowned for strength and durability, were once widely used for ship ropes before the advent of synthetic fibres.

Jute is a soft and illustrious material better suited to light footfall areas.

All natural fibres are moisture sensitive and need to be used away from dampness.

HOW LONG WILL IT LAST?

Natural fibre flooring is renowned for its strength and durability. Excessive moisture, heat, or rough wear and tear can shorten the life of your flooring.

However, correct installation, a gentle environment and care, will ensure your flooring will last.

IS IT A RENEWABLE RESOURCE?

Yes. Sisal, Jute and Seagrass are all renewable resources, grown specifically for their fibre, and Coir is a byproduct of the coconut industry.

WHERE IS THE FIBRE GROWN?

Our natural fibre flooring is imported from exotic destinations around the world. Sisal, extracted from the Agave Sisalana plant, is grown in Brazil, Mexico, China and Africa. Jute is made from the root of giant Corchorus plants grown in Bangladesh. Seagrass is collected from the paddy fields and riverbanks of China and Vietnam.

Coir, a fibre hand removed from the coconut husk, is grown on the swaying palms of India.

A Delicate Process

Once Sisal, Seagrass, and Jute are harvested, the fibres are graded for length and quality. Then after colouring and drying in the sun, they are spun into yarn or cords suitable for weaving.

Coir, the toughest fibre, is first softened in seawater lagoons and pounded into a soft filament, ready for spinning into yarns.

The spools of yarn are then woven on jacquard looms, a slow delicate process, best for producing the beautiful and intricate patterns and designs. Some Sisal is exported to Belgium and the Netherlands for weaving, but the majority of the other yarns are woven in the countries where it is grown. A natural rubber latex backing is applied for dimensional stability.

Choose from our wide selection of antique bronze, polished brass, brushed stainless steel and more.

Your Account Manager can advise you on selecting these finishes.

Maintenance

HOW DO I MAINTAIN NATURAL FIBRE FLOORING?

Microseal protection is available on request and can be applied to reduce the effects of fading, stains, and general wear and tear. Microseal penetrates the fibre by means of nanotechnology, maintaining the appearance and texture of the fibre.

WHAT ABOUT OVERALL CLEANING?

A good vacuum will suffice for regular cleaning. Never use a wet carpet cleaning system as shrinkage or water marking may occur.

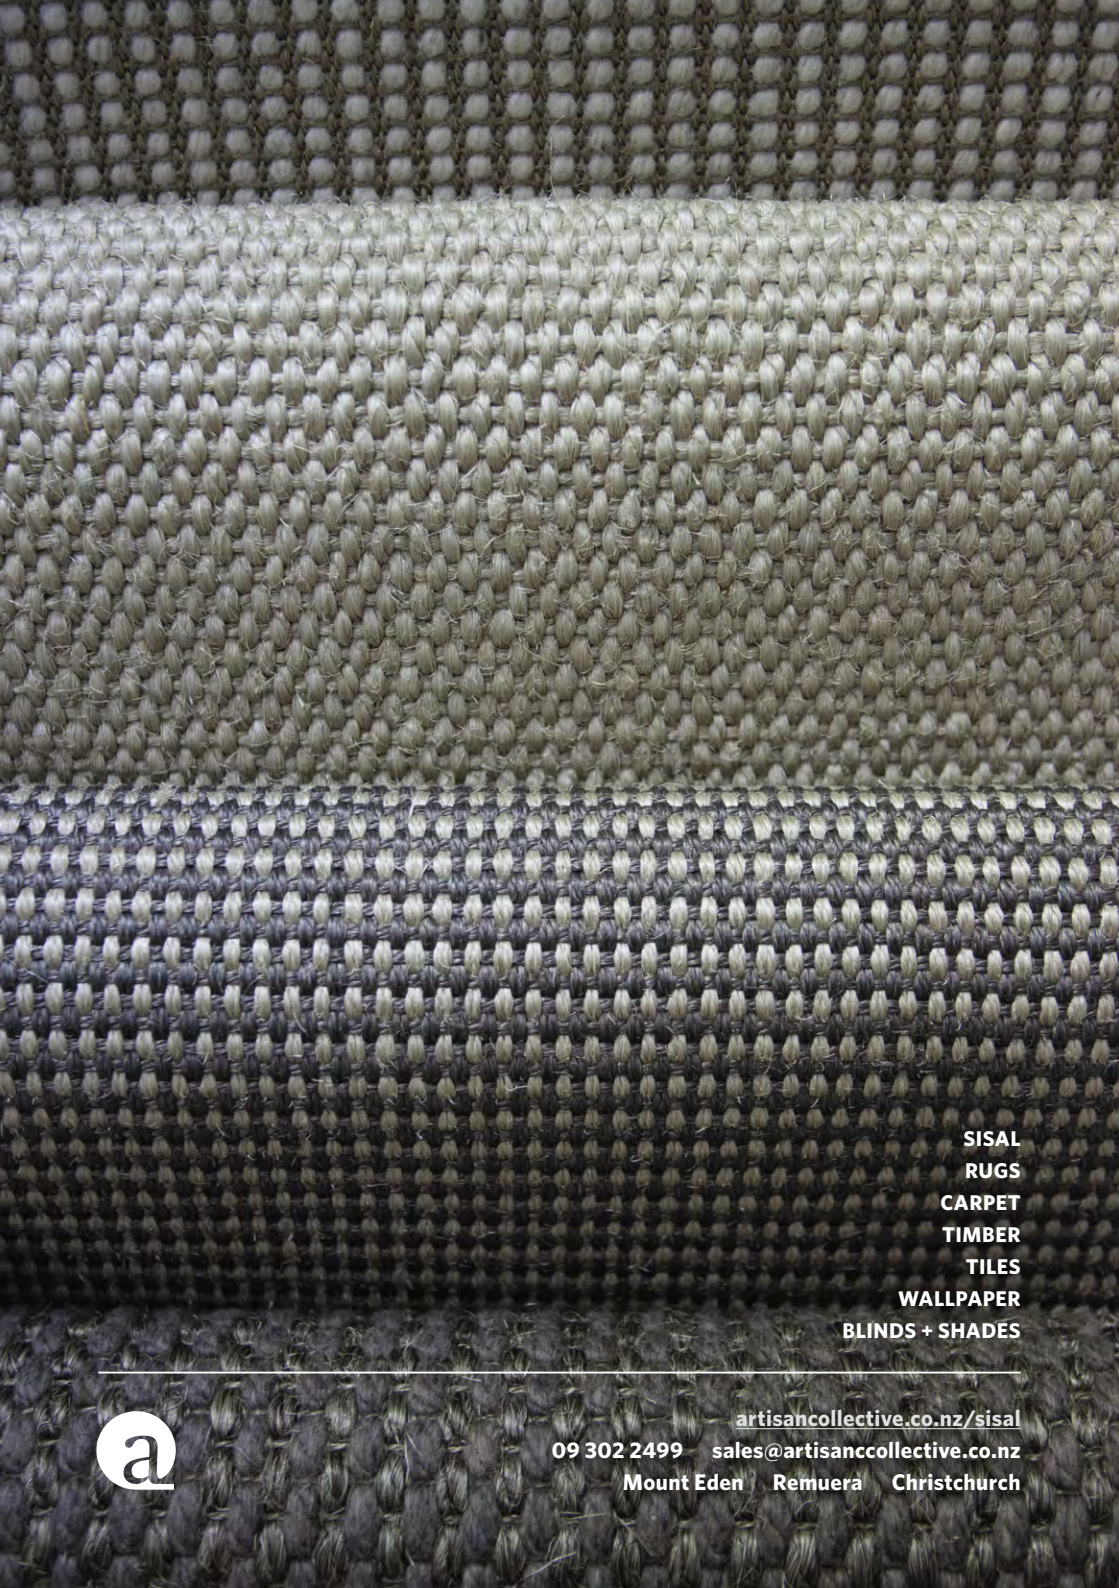

WILL THE EDGES FRAY?

Correct wall-to-wall installation will prevent carpet edges fraying. Rug edges must be bound or self-turned for long lasting durability, choose from our wide range of materials for creating unique rug borders.

WILL THE COLOUR FADE?

All natural fibres lose colour and fade over time, especially in direct sunlight, unless protected by Microseal. It is best to avoid placing dark natural flooring in intensely bright areas. Natural floor coverings are intended for indoor use.
